A Severe Blow for the Tory-Unionist Cause ... Both Sides Worked Like Beavers-Carrying Voters to the Polls in Carriages, LONDON, Jan. 23.-The election for the seat in the Rossendale division of Lancashire left vacant by the fact that Lord Hartington entered the House of Lords upon the death of his father, the late Duke of Devonshire, took place to-day. This contest has been the most florcely fought in England for many years, and both the Conservatives and the Liberals admitted that the next general election was likely to go as Rossendalo should go to-day. Sir Thomas Brooks was the Unionist candi date. He also received the hearty support of the Conservatives. Mr. J. H. Maden was the Gladstone-Liberal candidate. Sir Thomas Brooks, the owner of Crawshaw Hall, Rawtenstall, is a popular man in Rossendale. He was born in 1825, is a Deputy Lieutenant of the county, and before the Irish question came prominently to the fore in English politics was a sturdy worker in the Liberal cause. He was made a baronet but a short time ago.

Mr. J. H. Maden is a son of the late Henry

Maden. Esq., who for nearly a quarter of a century was Chairman of the Rossendale Liberal Association. He is a member of a famous cotton-spinning firm, a large employer of labor, a good public speaker, and worth about

The polling this morning was most brisk. and the excitement greater than is usually seen at the most important election in England. Some of the factories stopped work in order to enable the hands to give the whole day to election work. The weather was dull and wet, a fact which was looked upon as being against the chances of the Unionist (Conservative) candidate, for in dull, wet weather it is difficult to prevail upon some of the old Tories to turn out and do their duty at the

it is difficult to prevail upon some of the old Torios to turn out and do their duty at the polls.

The mill operatives voted in large numbers, Mr. Michael Davitt was in the thick of the fight, hurrying up the voters at Haslingden, a market town in the Rossendale division, noted for its cotton factories, coal mines, and foundries. Mr. Davitt, in former years, worked at Haslingden, and is said to be popular with the workingmen. The Liberals were somewhat handicapped by the fact that their chambion, Mr. J. H. Maden, is still confined to his bed, suffering from influenza.

On the other hand, the Unionist candidate, for Thomas Brooks, crove about, here, there, and everywhere, rallying his forces, coaxing people out of their houses, placing them in the hundred or more, private carriages placed at his disposal by the Unionists and Conservatives, and in every way doing his utmost to draw out every vote possible for his own side. The Liberals also adopted these tactics, and had almost as many carriages, cabs, vans, and dog earts at work, and the lieutenants of both candidates distinguished themselves by their feverish activity in this direction.

Rossendale embraces the municipal boroughs of Hacup, Rawtenstall, and Haslingden, and it may be said that practically the three municipalities are co-extensive with a Parliamentary division, which, in round figures, contains a population of 60,000, with 11,500 electors. The municipal elections were fought on party lines, and demonstrated beyond adoubt that Rossendale is Liberal to the core. Of the seventy-two municipal seats in Rossendale, fifty-two are held by the Liberals. The Mayors of the three boroughs are Liberals, as are also all the Aldermen, with the exception of one or two. These lacts, taken in connection with the signal victories the Liberals as achieved in the County Council elections. Argued well for the Liberal candidate, received achieved in the County Council elections, argued well for the Liberal party in the present struggle.

The total vote cast was 10,907, of which Mr. J. H. Maden, the Liberal candidate, received 6,008, and Sir Thomas Brooks, the Unionist candidate, 4,841, thus giving Mr. Maden the handsome majority of 1,226.

At the last election Lord Hartington had a majority of 1,450, or nearly 400 less than in 1885. In 1885 he received the Conservative vote, plus about 1,200 Liberals, while 1,000 or more abstained from voting.

Mr. Maden in his address to the electors said he would, if elected, support measures for the disestablishment of the Church in Scotland and Wales, for reform of the land laws, for an equitable division of taxation between owners and occupiers, and for granting compulsory powers to public bodies for the acquisition of land for allotments. Further, he declares that he is in favor of giving to the public direct control over the liquor traffic, of reforming registration, lessening the period for qualification, and providing that one man should have one vote. He would support a measure granting to Ireland a statutory Parliament, with ample legislative and administrative powers, subordinate to the imperial Parliament.

HISTORICAL TREASURES BURNED. Destruction of the Duke of Arenburg's Pal-

BETTERETS. Jan. 23.—Fire started in the palace of the Duke of Arenburg this morning at about 3 o'clock. The fire spread with such rapidity that it was with difficulty that the Prince and Princess De Croy d'Arenburg and their children escaped from the burning pal-They made their escape from the building in their night dresses. The servants were compelled to make an equally hurried departure. A very large number of the most precious and valuable of the Arenburg historical relies, some of them dating back to the year 1100, were consumed. Among the relies destroyed were a number of oil paintings, while others were so scorched, injured by water, or otherwise damaged, that they may be said to have lost nearly all value.

While liremen were fighting the flames from a fire escape outside the left wing of the palace, the fire escape colinpsed, throwing several firemen into the flames. One of these men was burned to death in sight of his comrades, and several were so severely injured that they will probably die.

several were so severely injured that they will probably die.

The fire originated in the bedroom of Princess Ludmille of Croy-Dulmen, eldest sister of the Duke.

The palace was one of the oldest in Europe, and in it was a room known as Count Egmont's rabinet, which has remained practically untouched since the time of his beheading in the market place at Brussels on June 4, 1508, by order of the Duke of Alva, Governor of the Netherlands, for the parthe took in supporting the Prince of Orange and the Beggars' League. This room was one of the many historical apartments destroyed.

The pavilion Egmont, with nearly all its valuable tapestries and other treasures, was also destroyed. Some of the Gobelin tapestries, however, were saved. The palace covered a large area near the new Palace of Justice, and contained an exquisite gallery of art.

The unlace was nearly gutted, involving an enormous loss in money and a still greater loss in historical relies. The outside walls of the palace and some portions of the left wing are still standing.

"DOC" WATTS, PHILANTEROPIST. A Pullman Porter Who Holpe Educate

Nouthern Negroes, There is probably not a man connected with the Pullman Car Company of the Pennsylvania Railroad, at the Jersey City end, who will not say a good word for "Doo" Watts. A Sun reporter called on him last night, and was re-ceived with a dignity that made it hard to believe that the intellectual-looking mulatto, with high forehead and scholarly eyeglasses. was a Pullman can porter. From his very modest account of himself the following facts in his life were learned:

His name is Lewis Watts. He was born in Georgia and attended school at the Atlanta University. Three years before graduation he saw what need there was in the country districts for educating the young colored children, and he gave up his own attendance so that his sister might have the money to complete her own course of study and become qualified to teach. He found employment in Atlanta, and subsequently came North, where he has been employed for the last seven years on the Pennsylvania Raliroad. Beyond what he requires for the necessities of life, he has sent all his earnings to his sister. Mrs. Dinsh Watts Pace. Mrs. Pace began teaching in a church in Covington. Ga. Then, with her brother's assistance, she rented a small house of two rooms, and at present owns a lot 200 by 150 feet, on which are four buildings. She has now an average attendance of 100 scholars a year, and employs an assistant.

Doo' Watts sat on the edge of his bed with his hands claamed between his knees and told his story. The reporter occupied the only vacant chair in the little room. All the others were taken up with books, as were the bookshelves and the mantelpicee and the table.

I spend all my spars time in New York huying what books my sister needs. I get them a cond hand, and they cost almost nothing. I've started a sort of library, and we loan and give away a good many books. I didn't use to believe in noveis, but I send them a good many now, such as Ben Hur' and 'The Fair God!'

Mr. Watts rends a good deal. His private library consists mostly of books on historical and ethnological subjects. He is making a particular study of the nogry race.

You see, he said, putting wood in the miniature stove and straightening out the matting. "It's hard work for my sister. The children learn a little at school and then go back to their uneducated parents and unloarn it all. There's no one to make them learn at home and they have to be in the cott. delds so much that the work is irregular. They aren't classified and two teachers aren't enough for 100 pickaninnies. But she is getting on pretty well. I just give her what money I can and let her do what she likes." that his sister might have the money to complete her own course of study and become

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

The Poughkeepsie Bridge in the Hands of a Syndicate Representing the Rending.

The details of the mysterious Poughkeepsie Bridge deal were finally made public yesterday, and some of those who have been prophesying all sorts of things may be a bit surprised Mr. Jay Gould, for one, has nothing to do with the bridge. A syndicate was formed which acquired a controlling interest in the bonds, and the parties composing it were mainly interested in the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad. President John S. Wilson of the Poughkeepsle Bridge and Central New England and Western Railroad took pains the day before to deny that the Reading was likely day before to deny that the Reading was likely to got the property. The Reading is backed by the Lehigh Valley, Baltimore and Ohio, Boston and Maine, and New York and New England Railroads, all of which promise to use the bridge for their outlet east and west to and from New England.

The system was secured through the control of the bonds. The Delaware and New England Company had control of the bonds of the bridge and of the Central New England, and the deal was made with the former company. The bonds and preferred stock of the entire bridge system and connecting railroads argregate $10.400.000. The syndicate agreed to fund the bridge bonds and those of the Central New England Railroad at 80 per cent, or about $8,250,000, at four per cent, interest. The railroad bonds, however, after four years will bear five per cent interest. The bonded in debtedness of the bridge is $5,000,000, the bonds and preferred stock of the Central New England amount to $4,100,000, and the bonds of the Delaware and New England to $1,300,000.

The deal amounts practically to a lease, and of the Delaware and New England to $1,300,-000.

The deal amounts practically to a lease, and the entire property was acquired without the expenditure of a dollar. It is a part of the plan to get control of the Pennsylvania, Poughkeepsie and Boston Railroad, ninety-five miles long, extending from Campbell Hall to Slatington, and forming a connecting link between the Reading and Lehigh Valley and the bridge. There is already a through traffic arrangement via the bridge, but this will be greatly improved, and the new owners of the bridge system will make a bid to acquire a good part of the New England traffic.

Jersey Central to Extend its Block Signs

Bystem. The Central Railroad of New Jersey has let the contract for extending the pneumatic auomatic block signal system from Bergen Point to Bound Brook. The block signal sysmain line from Jersey City to Bound Brook. which is the busiest part of the road. When which is the busiest part of the road. When the air pipes for working the signals are stretched over Newark Bay it is the intention to operate the draw of the bridge by compressed air, instead of steam, as at present. The blocks across the bridge will be only a short distance apart, for greater safety in case of heavy fogs. From Elizabeth to Bound Brook the blocks will be half a mile apart. The Jersey Central has ordered 1,000 gondola coal cars, and 250 box cars, of 50,000 pounds capacity each. The box cars will be squipped with air brakes, and the entire new equipment will have automatic couplers.

The Chicago and Grand Trunk and the Grand Trunk of Canada are taking steps to secure their full share of the increased traffic that is expected during the World's Fair at Chicago. Considerable of the road is to be double-tracked. This has already been done between Hamilton and Toronto. It is the intention also to double the track between Hamilton and Niagara Falls, and to build a connection between the Sarnia branch (which is in a direct line between Chicago and Niagara Falls) and Glencee on the main line, between Detroit and Niagara Falls, in order to facilitate the handling of traffic which now goes by way of London, and which is somewhat hampered by the heavy traffic on the single line. This latter line is under construction.
